

UNIT 2 ACTIVITY ELEMENTS OF A BRAND

Baltisoto Robert Martin L.
4TH YEAR BSIT

BRAND ELEMENT	WHAT DID YOU OBSERVE?	How Does It Support the Brand?
1. Logo/Visual mark	The logo is a 3 clawed monster scar	It communicate a strong aggressive vibe it is easy to remember because u can always see it in stores, motorcycles decals, cap, clothes, and gym.
2. Color	GREEN, BLACK	Eye catching and easy to spot
3. Typography	It represents gothic hardcore action vibe	Hardcore rock, extreme sports.
4. Imagery/ visual size	aggressive, high-impact, and rebellious imagery	The jagged, violently torn "M" claw mark paired with eroded, gothic typography.
5. Tone of voice	Monster Energy communicates in a way that feels less like a traditional corporation and more like an edgy, peer-to-peer media outlet. Across all channels, they explicitly avoid standard "sales pitch" language, opting instead for a tone that is hype-driven, raw, informal, and action-oriented.	The language of Monster Energy crafts a distinct rebel, outlaw, and thrill-seeker archetype. While other brands pitch clean energy or professional focus, Monster constructs an aggressive, hyper-charged personality that revels in breaking molds and pushing absolute limits.
6. Target audience	Extreme Sports Athletes and Fans, Skaters, BMX riders, motocross racers, snowboarders, and surfers form the bedrock of Monster's community. The brand sponsors hundreds of athletes in these spaces.	Monster Energy's brand elements are meticulously engineered to resonate with its high-octane, counter-cultural audience. Every visual choice rejects traditional corporate polish in favor of raw, industrial intensity.

7. Brand personality	Rebellious Intense Fearless Unapologetic	Rebellious: The brand deliberately rejects corporate polish, aligning itself with counter-cultural subcultures like skate, motocross, and heavy metal that thrive outside the mainstream. Intense: Everything from its aggressive neon-green-on-black color scheme to its high-octane marketing copy is designed to feel loud, high-voltage, and over-the-top. Fearless: By championing extreme sports athletes and high-risk thrill-seekers, the brand celebrates pushing physical limits and facing danger head-on. Unapologetic: Monster refuses to water down its identity for mass appeal, proudly owning its gritty, high-energy, and sometimes polarizing persona.

Digital Platform Check Explain briefly why these words fit the brand. Choose TWO digital platforms where the brand appears (e.g., website, Facebook, Instagram, TikTok, YouTube, or online advertising). Compare how the brand presents itself.

What stays consistent across platforms?

The core rebellious and high-octane attitude stays consistent.

The signature black-and-neon-green color scheme stays consistent.

Feature placements of sports athletes and influencers stay consistent.

What is adapted for the platform?

Platform 1: Instagram

Short-form Reels are used to match the paced nature of the platform.

Fire visual aesthetics are emphasized to capture attention quickly.

Snappy punchy captions are used for direct product drop announcements.

Interactive story polls and community sweepstakes help drive engagement.

Platform 2: YouTube

Long-form mini-documentaries are created to tell stories.

Full event recaps are produced to give viewers an experience.

Immersive, behind-the-scenes athlete storytelling and interviews are featured.

High-production-value cinematic sports footage is included to elevate the viewing experience.

Brand Evaluation

As a brand designer I would keep Monster Energy's core identity because its iconic black-and-neon-green aesthetic and rebellious attitude have built immense brand equity. These elements have earned loyalty from its target audience.

I would also improve the brand's digital flexibility. The visual system could be refined to better support more modern minimalist interfaces. This change would help the brand adapt to health-conscious product lines like zero-sugar alternatives.

The goal is clarity and functionality over visual clutter. This will allow the brand to scale into mainstream wellness spaces without losing its edge.

For product lines some of the hyper-aggressive typography could be softened. This would broaden consumer appeal while keeping the brand's signature edge.

Ultimately this balanced update would maintain the adrenaline-fueled spirit of the brand. It would also optimize the brand, for digital environments where clean design and clear messaging matter.
